

UNIT NO 3

MEDIA LITERACY IN THE MODERN AGE

Answer the following Questions.

Q.1 What is media literacy, and why is it considered a vital skill in the modern era?

Ans: Media literacy is the ability to critically understand and evaluate content across various platforms. It is vital in the modern era because it helps individuals become informed navigators of the complex information landscape, enabling them to make informed decisions and engage actively in society.

Q.2 Explain the significance of each key component of media literacy (Access, Analysis, Evaluation, Creation, Action) in navigating the modern media landscape?

Ans: Access: allows individuals to obtain and use media in various formats.

Analysis: helps decode and understand the meaning behind media messages.

Evaluation: involves critically assessing media content for quality and credibility.

Creation: empowers individuals to produce responsible media content.

Action: encourages socially responsible and productive engagement with media.

Q.3. Provide examples of how media literacy can be applied to combat fake news and promote responsible content creation?

Ans: Media literacy helps individuals evaluate sources critically, cross-check facts, and reflect on biases, which are essential in combating fake news. It also encourages content creators to understand the ethical implications of their work and be accountable for its society.

Q.4. How does media literacy contribute to creating a well-informed and critically thinking individual capable of engaging with diverse perspectives?

Ans: Media literacy encourages individuals to seek out and evaluate a range of perspectives, foster critical thinking and a deeper understanding of global issues, ultimately making individuals more informed, flexible and critical media users.

Q.5. Discuss the role of media literacy in guarding against extremism?

Ans: Media literacy equips individuals to discern extremist content and question harmful messages, promoting civil discourse and resilience against extremist narratives. It also helps users navigate media platforms with awareness of harmful content.

Q.6 Can you describe a time when you encountered information on social media or the internet that seemed questionable or misleading? How did you decide whether or not to trust it, and what steps did you take to verify accuracy?

Ans: When encountering questionable information, individuals apply media literacy skills by evaluating sources, cross checking facts, and reflecting on potential biases before deciding whether to trust it, ensuring that only verified information is accepted.
