LONG QUESTIONS

Q.1 Write a detailed note on the services of Sir Syed Ahmad Khan or Aligarh Movement for the Muslims of India.

1 Introduction:

Sir Syed Ahmed Khan founded this movement. Muslims of India woke up after the war of Independence 1857. He started educational, social, political and religious movement for Muslims, which is called the Aligarh Movement.

2 British attitude toward Muslims and Hindus:

The British were friends of Hindus. The Hindus were not a potential threat to the English because the British didn't take the reins of power from the Hindus; rather they took the power from the Muslims. They knew that if the Muslims were not subjugated in all walks of life, the Muslims would avenge their defeat and come to power again. The British deprived Muslims of all opportunities in social, political, economic, cultural and religious spheres. They badly offend the Muslim religion and culture.

3 Role of Sir Syed Ahmed Khan:

Sir Syed thought it necessary for the Muslims to get modern education and for that sole purpose, he started the Aligarh Movement.

4 EDUCATIONAL SERVICES OF SIR SYED AHMED KHAN:

In India from 1857 to 1859, total number of graduate Hindus was 715 while total Muslims graduates were 20. Sir Syed felt the need that the Muslims had to get modern education to compete with the Hindus and British. He took following concrete and fruitful steps for the education of Muslims.

5 Madrassah Moradabad:

In 1859, Sir Syed established a Persian School at the city of Muradabad. In that school, along with religious education, Urdu, Arabic, Persian and English were also taught.

6 Madrassah Ghazipur:

In 1862, Sir Syed was posted to the city of Ghazipur. He also established a school there.

7 Scientific Society:

Sir Syed founded a Scientific Society in the year 1863. Basic purpose of this society was to translate all science-related books from English language into Urdu for the Indian Muslims in order to persuade Muslims to obtain education. The Ulema of that time turned against Sir Syed and issued a Fatwa that any Muslim who studied English language or any other academic discipline initiated by the Britishers would be infidel (Kafir).

8 Establishment of M.A.O. School:

In 1875, Sir Syed established a school at Aligarh for Muslims by the name of M.A.O.

(Muhammadan Anglo Oriental High School).

9 Establishment of M.A.O. College:

After two years i.e., in 1877, this school was upgraded to M.A.O. College. Along with scientific education, Islamiyat and oriental history of the sub-continent were also imparted to students in this college.

10 Asaar-us-Sanadeed:

This book was authored by Sir Syed Ahmed Khan. Sir Syed made a meticulous study and research on all the historical buildings and monuments constructed by the Muslim rulers during the period of Sultans of Delhi (1206-1526) and the Mughal period (1526-1857). This is a great work on the part of Sir Syed Ahmed Khan for the benefit of the students of architecture and researchers on history.

11: Establishment of Muhammadan Educational Conference:

Sir Syed founded Muhammadan Educational Conference in the year 1886 to promote education among the Muslims.

POLITICAL SERVICES:

Following political services were rendered by Sir Syed Ahmed Khan for the Indian Muslims.

12 Two Nation Theory:

Sir Syed at the time of Urdu-Hindi conflict said in the year 1867, "Urdu-Hindi conflict is the starting of space of separation between Hindus and Muslims which will increase and gradually a day will come when both the nations will separate after division."

13 Causes of Indian Mutiny:

After the War of Independence 1857, Sir Syed compiled a magazine named Risala-e- Asbab-e- Baghawat-e-Hind (causes of Indian Mutiny). In which he explained to the British that only Muslims were not responsible for this mutiny rather Hindus were equally responsible for it. He didn't call it the War of Independence (1857) rather attributed it a mutiny or rebellion. He thought that this mutiny was sparked by some trouble mongers.

Religious Services: He rendered the following religious services for the Indian Muslims.

14 Khutbat-e-Ahmadiya:

Sir Syed rendered many useful services in religion during his Movement. He gave his series of public addresses to clarify the objections raised by William Moore against our Holy Prophet (SAWW) in the latter's book 'Life of Muhammad (SAWW)'. Sir Syed series of addresses were later printed in a book called Khutbat-e-Ahmadiya in reply to the book 'Life of Muhammad (SAWW)'.

15 Tabaian-ul-Kalaam: He wrote a commentary on Bible in a philosophical style and explained similarities between Islam and Christianity with solid arguments to bridge up the gulf between Muslims and the British.

16 Tafseer-e-Quarn: Sir Syed wrote the Tafseer of Holy Quran in seven volumes but still he was not able to complete it before his death. At the time of his death, it was more than half done.

17. Effects of Aligarh Movement: This Movement revolutionized the economic, social and political status of Muslims, promoted Urdu language and helped a lot in the unification of Muslims religiously and morally.

a. Partition of Bengal: The partition took place in 1905 and Bengal was divided into two parts i.e. East and West Bengal. This partition was annulled in 1911 due to Hindu violence and aggression.

b: Economic Development of Muslims: Muslims started to get western education along with religious education. In this way they got jobs which helped them and made them economically strong.

c: Simla Deputation: In 1906, 35 eminent Muslims leaders met Lord Minto and demanded for the right of separate electorates for the Muslims in which they succeeded.

d: Formation of All India Muslim League:

It was 20th annual session of Muhammadan Educational Conference at the residence of Nawab Saleem Ullah Khan at Dhaka on 30th December, 1906 when Muslim League was formed under the famous leadership. Sir Aga Khan became the first president.

e: Establishment of Aligarh University: It was the desire of Sir Syed to upgrade M.A.O. College into a university but this cherished dream did not materialize in his life. In 1920, the college was given the status of a university now called Aligarh Muslim University.

f: Role in Pakistan Movement: Students of Aligarh University, on the demand of the Quaid-e-Azam, struggled for a separate country. This helped a lot in Pakistan Movement.

g: Negative Effect: Sir Syed himself said, "I am astonished the people who get education become evil and worst nation instead of good." This was because most of the teachers of Aligarh Muslim University were British and students adopted western civilization.

COMMENTS: Had Sir Syed not started this movement; Muslims would have been the slaves of British and Hindus. In short, this movement gave a great strength to Muslims of India and hence helped in the creation of Pakistan.

Q.2 What were the main causes/aims and objectives of the establishment of All India Muslim League?

The All India Muslim League was founded on 30th December 1906 at Dhaka (now in Bangladesh), under the leadership of prominent Muslim leaders like Nawab Salimullah Khan, Sir Aga Khan, and Nawab Viqar-ul-Mulk. Sir Aga Khan became the first president of All India Muslim League. The League was created to safeguard the interests of Muslims in British India, especially at a time when the Indian National Congress was becoming dominant and Muslims were politically weak and under-represented.

1. Protection of Muslim Rights

After the War of Independence (1857), Muslims faced severe punishment and lost their jobs, lands and influence. The British considered them disloyal, and the Congress did not raise their voice. The League was created to protect the religious, social, and political rights of Muslims in all areas of life. 2. Separate Muslim Identity: Muslims had a separate religion, culture, history, and language from Hindus. They were afraid that Congress's "one nation" theory would destroy their identity. The League aimed to preserve and protect Muslim identity within the Indian political system.

3. Proper Representation in Government

Congress was demanding full democratic rule, which would mean Hindu majority rule. Muslims feared being outnumbered in elections. The League demanded separate representation so that Muslims could elect their own leaders and be treated fairly.

4. Opposition to Congress Domination

The Congress, formed in 1885, started showing a clear bias towards Hindu interests. It never fully represented Muslims. The Muslim League was formed as a political counterbalance to protect Muslim voices in national decisions.

5. Educational Uplift of Muslims

Muslims were backward in modern education, especially in English. The League encouraged Muslims to get modern education so they could compete with other communities and improve their social and economic conditions.

6. Unity among Indian Muslims

Muslims in India lived in different regions, spoke different languages, and followed different customs. The League tried to unite them under one platform so they could work together for common goals.

7. Demand for Separate Electorates

One of the main demands of the League was separate electorates – where Muslims could vote for Muslim candidates only. This was necessary to protect their political rights in a Hindu-majority country.

8. Religious Protection

The League aimed to protect Islam and its values, such as Urdu language, Muslim dress code, religious practices, mosques, and education. Many Hindu leaders and Congress members wanted to impose Hindu culture, which Muslims opposed. The Hindu sectarian organization 'Arya Samaj' formed 'Gao Raksha Sabah' for the protection of cows in 1883. The goal was to stop the Muslims from sacrificing cows.

9. Loyalty to British Government

At the start, the League showed loyalty to the British in the hope that they would safeguard Muslim rights in return. It wanted to show that Muslims were peace-loving and cooperative citizens of British India.

10. Political Awareness and Guidance

Most Muslims were not involved in politics. The League provided them with a platform to learn about their rights and duties. It guided them to take part in national issues and future elections.

11. Protection from Hindu Majority Rule

Muslims feared that if the Congress succeeded in getting full power, they would be dominated by the Hindu majority in every field – jobs, education, politics, and business. The League aimed to protect them from this domination.

12. Foundation for a Separate Homeland: Although the League was not initially demanding Pakistan, it laid the foundation for a separate homeland by highlighting the differences between Muslims and Hindus. This idea grew stronger over time and led to the creation of Pakistan in 1947.

Conclusion

The formation of the All India Muslim League in 1906 was a major turning point in the history of the Muslims of South Asia. It was established to protect the rights, identity, and future of Indian Muslims in a system that was increasingly ignoring them. The League united the Muslims on one platform, increased their political awareness, and fought for their place in Indian politics. Under the leadership of Quaid-e-Azam Muhammad Ali Jinnah, the Muslim League later became the driving force behind the Pakistan Movement, achieving a separate homeland for Muslims in 1947

Comments: Had Sir Syed not started this movement; Muslims would have been the slaves of British and Hindus. In short, this movement gave a great strength to Muslims of India and hence helped in the creation of Pakistan.

Q.5 Discuss the background and importance of Lahore Resolution.

Lahore Resolution – Background and Importance

The Lahore Resolution, passed on 23rd March 1940, was a turning point in the history of the Indian Muslims. It gave a clear direction to their political struggle and laid the foundation of Pakistan. The resolution was passed during the All India Muslim League's Annual Session at Minto Park, Lahore.

1. British Rule in India: After the War of Independence (1857), India came under British rule. Over time, political awareness grew, and both Hindus and Muslims started demanding rights. However, the British system favoured the Hindu majority, leaving Muslims behind.

2. Formation of Congress (1885)

The Indian National Congress was formed to raise political demands. But soon, it became clear that Congress mostly represented Hindu interests, and Muslims were ignored.

3. Muslim League's Creation (1906)

In response, Muslims formed the All India Muslim League to protect their political, cultural, and religious identity. This party later played a central role in demanding a separate homeland.

4. Two-Nation Theory

The idea that Muslims and Hindus were two different nations based on religion, culture, and history became stronger. Sir Syed Ahmad Khan, and later Allama Iqbal and Quaid-e-Azam, strongly promoted this concept.

5. Failure of Congress-Muslim Unity

Attempts to work together, like the Lucknow Pact (1916) and Khilafat Movement, failed. The Congress betrayed Muslims after gaining power in the 1937 elections, showing clear bias against Muslim culture, language, and rights.

6. Congress Rule (1937–1939)

When Congress came to power in 7 provinces, it treated Muslims unfairly, promoted Hindi over Urdu, forced the "Bande Mataram" song, and introduced anti-Muslim educational policies. This created fear and frustration among Muslims.

7. Quaid-e-Azam's Leadership

Quaid-e-Azam Muhammad Ali Jinnah emerged as a strong Muslim leader. He united Muslims across India and convinced them that co-existence with Hindus was not possible without guarantees.

8. Need for a Separate Homeland

Due to continued mistreatment and religious threats, Muslims realized that they needed a separate state where they could live freely according to Islam, without Hindu interference.

9. Lahore Session of 1940

The annual session of Muslim League was held at Minto Park, Lahore, from 22 to 24 March 1940. Muslims from all over India participated. A.K. Fazlul Haq, the Chief Minister of Bengal, presented the resolution.

10. Content of Lahore Resolution

- Independent states should be created in Muslim-majority areas.
- Muslims were a separate nation, and their rights must be protected.
- No constitution would be accepted without the approval of Muslims.

Though the word "Pakistan" was not used, the idea was very clear: Muslims wanted a separate homeland. Muslim leadership adopted this word on the very next day as the press not only in India but also in Britain ridiculed the idea of a separate home land for the Muslims so. Lahore Resolution was re-named as Pakistan Resolution on 23rd March 1940.

11. Historical Importance of the Resolution

- It gave direction and purpose to Muslim struggle.
- It united Muslims of different regions under one demand.
- It made the creation of Pakistan a clear goal, not just a hope.
- It showed the world that Muslims would no longer accept Hindu domination.

12. Foundation of Pakistan

The Lahore Resolution laid the foundation of Pakistan. Within 7 years, on 14 August 1947, Pakistan came into being. This resolution became the most important document in the history of the Pakistan Movement.

Conclusion

The Lahore Resolution of 1940 was a milestone in Muslim political history. It gave the Muslims a clear path, strong unity, and a new hope. It transformed the dream of Pakistan into a political goal and provided the basis for the Two-Nation Theory. Today, 23rd March is celebrated as Pakistan Day, honoring this great achievement in Muslim history.

Q.6 Evaluate the initial problems faced by Pakistan at the time of its inception, and explain how the country endeavoured to overcome these challenges.

Administrative Problem:

There were so many administrative problems at the very inception of Pakistan;

1. Lack of officers: The newly born state suffered lack of trained officers to run the administration. Most of the administrative staff was either British or Hindu so after the partition the staff left Pakistan which resulted in lack of trained officers.
2. Lack of Trained staff: There was lack of trained staff to implement the administrative infrastructure in the country. Due to this situation the lower staff was promoted on higher designations which resulted poor and unsatisfactory performance on their part.
3. Lack of technical staff: Inexperienced or untrained staff was also a big issue to handle the administrative affairs of the country. There was also no institution for the training of the technical staff so it took so long for the development of the technical staff.
4. Lack of offices and stationery: In the beginning, the federal and provincial secretariats were lacking offices and stationery items. Paper, pen, ink and all other stationery items were lacking in the offices. The whole infrastructure to run the administration through offices was ineffective. The government servants were forced to use berry thorns instead of common pins or staples in the offices.
5. Lack of furniture: There were no chairs, tables and other furniture available in the offices. The sincere and loyal people in administration worked day and night by placing files on the floors and windows.

6. Lack of energy and power resources: The newly born state was lacking energy and power resources as there were no dams to produce hydro-electricity or any project of thermal electricity etc. Financial constraints restrained Pakistan to spend on establishing energy producing projects.
7. Secretariat building were non-functional: The condition of secretariat buildings was in bad shape and also not sufficient enough to run the administration properly. The offices of federal secretariat were working in the buildings of Sindh Secretariat.
8. Settlement of Refugees: As a result of the partition 6.5 million people migrated from India to Pakistan and 5.5 million people migrated from Pakistan to India. The 5.5 million people who migrated from Pakistan to India included 4.7 million people who were non-Muslims. To deal with such a large influx of immigrants, the Quaid-e-Azam organized 'Refugee Fund', 'Refugee Camp' and 'Pakistan Fund'.
9. Bad condition of means of transportation and communication: The infrastructure of the newly born state was worst in its form. Print media was very badly affected by the initial days of partition. Before partition, the administration was mainly done by the British or Hindus so under a very well-thought-out nefarious designs, they deliberately corrupted the whole infrastructure.
10. Financial Issues: Initially, Pakistan was to receive one-fourth of the total amount of Rs: 4 billion, equating to Rs: 0.75 billion. However, the Indian government deducted Rs: 0.25 billion from the initial payment of Rs: 1 billion, citing the burden of foreign debt left by the British government to be shared. Only Rs: 0.20 billion was initially provided to Pakistan, with the rest deliberately delayed. Gandhi's intervention led to the release of Rs: 0.50 billion by Nehru's administration, leaving Rs: 0.05 billion outstanding.
11. Unjust division of Military Assets: Field Marshall Gen. Aurchilek, the British high-command army officer, was detailed out to look after the division of military assets judiciously between India and Pakistan. When he observed ill intentions, unjust attitude and mala fide actions of the Nehru Government, he wrote a letter to the British Government complaining that the Indian government is all determined to damage the interests of Pakistan and never wanted to see Pakistan on firm grounds.
12. Unjust division Armed of Forces: The share of armed forces which came to Pakistan was very less in number as most of the army was serving in the remotest parts of the country or in other Muslim countries. This unjust division resulted in weak defence of Pakistan.
13. Lack of Constitution: At the time of independence, Indian Act 1935 was taken as interim constitution of Pakistan. It was advised by the Quaid-e-Azam to formulate Pakistan's own constitution as soon as possible. But this process was delayed due to one reason after the other. The first constitution of Pakistan was formulated in 1956.
14. Lack and backwardness in industrial sector: There were 921 industrial units in United India and Pakistan was given only 34 units. Only 9 sugar mills and 16 armaments factories came in the share of Pakistan. These units were not sufficient to fulfil the needs of the country.
15. Lack of Foreign Policy: Foreign policy is one of the main issues of a country to survive peacefully in the world. At the time of independence Pakistan had no foreign policy. To maintain international relations, the Quaid-e-Azam gave great stress over this issue.

16. Canal Water dispute: Pakistan's economy was basically depending upon agriculture and especially the land of Punjab was the most fertile one as it received the waters of five rivers for irrigation. On 1st April, 1948, India cut the water supply of the two eastern rivers without any intimation which resulted in great setback to our economy. This dispute was resolved in 1960 under the Indus Water Treaty.
17. Issue of merging of states: There were 580 princely states in Pakistan and India altogether. It was decided in Indian Independence Act that these states would decide their destiny by themselves to join either country before 15th August, 1947. There were many states which failed to declare their decision before the deadline. Resultantly, these states were forcefully occupied by the Indian army like Hyderabad, Mangrol, Manawadar, and Kashmir etc.
18. Geographical problem: As there was a distance of 1,000 miles between East and West wings of Pakistan so it became very difficult to move and control good hold on defence of both parts. There was Indian Territory in between East and West Pakistan which ultimately resulted in the dismemberment of Pakistan in 1971.
19. Pro-Indian provincial governments: The provincial government of NWFP headed by Dr. Khan Sahib was dismissed on 22nd August 1947 right after one week of Independence of Pakistan. The provincial government of Sindh headed by Ayub Khuoro was dismissed on 24th April, 1948.
20. Insufficient health facilities: The number of hospitals was very less and not sufficient to deal with the huge number of patients. Due to cold and sufferings of migration from India to Pakistan, a large number of people were badly wounded or seriously ill.

Scarcity of food and other eatables: The result of migration of huge number of people caused a great setback to food making units. The crops of serials and grains were totally destroyed. The raw material for the industries was also not available which caused a great problem for the people for unavailability of eatables.
21. Scarcity of courts and justice: Many issues aroused in the early days of Pakistan's history. There was a lack of planning concerning courts and judiciary to deal with any sort of criminal act.
22. Early death of father of the nation: Quaid died on 11th September 1948; the newly born state got orphaned. The later period of history revealed that it was the most devastating reality that crumbled the already weak structure of the nation. Had Quaid lived for few more years, the very fate of our motherland would have been differently written.

Quaid's efforts to consolidate the newly born state as Governor General:

1. Flying of National Flag: To create a sense of love and affection for the nation, the Quaid ordered for the flying of national flag on the buildings in East and West Pakistan. The flying of the flag would remind the people about the sacrifices given by their loved ones.
2. Formation of Cabinet: On 15th August 1947, the Quaid formulated first cabinet of Pakistan. Initially the members were 7 but later they were increased to 12. This cabinet worked very hard to strengthen Pakistan.
3. Membership in United Nations: on September 30, 1947, Pakistan got the membership of the United Nations. It was the Quaid's vision that Pakistan should stand with the developing nations in the world.

4. Making of Foreign Policy: Quaid stressed on establishing friendly relations with other countries of the world and also was fond of democracy in the country so, he tried his level best to introduce and establish his will for better future of Pakistan.

5. Advice to the public servants:

The Quaid advised the public servants to make a proper use of their authority. He told them that they do not belong to a ruling class; they are actually the servants of the people. The Quaid asked them to create a sense of friendliness and higher standards of honour and integrity.

6. Making appointment of civil services: The Indian Civil Service was replaced with the Pakistan Civil Service and the junior officers were promoted to higher ranks.

Steps for the immigrants:

The Quaid gave priority to deal with the problems of immigrants. He not only organizes refugees fund and refugees' camps but also monitored the working and efficiency of the concerned ministry. He urged the people here in West Pakistan to help the refugee as they suffered for being Muslim.

7. Established Pakistan Fund:

The Quaid established Pakistan Fund to deal with the economic issues of the country. Stronger Pakistan was his dream for that did not even care about his failing health and worked very hard till the last moment of his life.

8. Confidence building measures:

To answer the Indian propaganda, the Quaid toured even the remotest area of Pakistan for the confidence building of the people. He made speeches and told the people that Pakistan came in being to live forever on the map of the world.

9. Advice to the students:

The Quaid regarded students as the makers and architects of Pakistan. He urged them to be sincere to themselves, with their parents and above all with their nation.

Comments: The dead body of Quaid was just weighing 28 kg. But that thin, weak, frail body kept in itself the most gigantic, profound and super human spirit. He was the greatest personal of 20th century who planned, struggled and achieved what he thought for the future of Muslim of India. He was a man of great conviction, bravery and intelligence.

Q.5 Justify that Two-Nation Theory became the basis for the creation of Pakistan.

1. Introduction to the Two-Nation Theory

The Two-Nation Theory argues that Hindus and Muslims are distinct nations with separate identities, necessitating independent states. Sir Syed Ahmad Khan's early emphasis on Muslim socio-political awareness laid the groundwork, highlighting the need for Muslims to preserve their identity amid colonial rule.

2. Historical Background:

During British rule, Muslims and Hindus coexisted but faced widening social and political divides. Sir Syed Ahmad Khan advocated for Muslims to modernize and unite to protect their interests, warning against assimilation that could threaten their distinctness.

3. Religious and Cultural Divergences

The differences in religious practices and social customs deepened the divide. Sir Syed's efforts to promote Islamic education aimed to strengthen Muslim identity, reinforcing the idea that Muslims needed their own institutions to safeguard their culture.

4. Political Mobilization of Muslims

As political awareness grew, Muslims felt increasingly insecure. Sir Syed emphasized loyalty to the British and advised Muslims to build their own political and educational organizations, setting the stage for the later political mobilization by Muslim leaders like Quaid-e-Azam.

5. The Concept of a Separate Muslim Identity

Allama Iqbal articulated the idea that Muslims are a separate spiritual and cultural entity, deserving their own nation. His call for an independent Muslim homeland reflected the spiritual dimension of the Two-Nation Theory, inspiring leaders like Jinnah.

6. The Role of Leaders in Promoting the Theory

Quaid-e-Azam Muhammad Ali Jinnah's leadership was pivotal. He championed the Two-Nation Theory publicly, insisting that Muslims and Hindus are separate nations. Jinnah emphasized that Pakistan was essential for Muslims to exercise their political rights and preserve their religion.

7. The Lahore Resolution of 1940

This resolution marked a turning point, demanding independent states for Muslims in regions with a Muslim majority. Iqbal's vision and Jinnah's leadership converged here, formalizing the Two-Nation Theory into institutional political demand.

8. The Impact of Colonial Policies

British policies favored division, reminding Muslims of their separate identity and compelling leaders to organize politically. Sir Syed himself advocated for reform to protect Muslim interests, aligning with the demand for a separate state.

9. The Failures of Hindu-Muslim Unity

Attempts at Hindu-Muslim unity, exemplified by the Congress, failed to address Muslim concerns. Sir Syed warned against ignoring Muslim interests, and both Iqbal and Jinnah believed that genuine unity was impossible without recognition of Muslim separate identity.

10. The Negotiation and Partition of India

The culmination of these beliefs was the partition in 1947. Jinnah's insistence on a separate homeland was based on the principles of the Two-Nation Theory, which was rooted in the recognition of Muslims as a distinct nation, as articulated by Iqbal and initially supported by Sir Syed.

11. Constitutional Foundations of Pakistan

Pakistan's constitution reflected the ideological roots of the Two-Nation Theory, emphasizing Islamic identity and Muslim nationhood. Jinnah's vision was that Pakistan would be a homeland where Muslims could practice their religion freely.

12. Conclusion

Sir Syed's efforts in awakening Muslim consciousness, Iqbal's spiritual and philosophical advocacy, and Jinnah's political leadership collectively established the Two-Nation Theory as the ideological bedrock of Pakistan, shaping its destiny as a separate Muslim state.
